PUZZLE CARDS

Activity Guide

Set of 10, double-sided, self-checking puzzles.

Everyday Activities sequencing puzzle cards teach the results of cause and effect, one of the basic elements of reasoning.

Challenge children to create a continuing story to their favorite daily activity sequence. Use the three card sequence as the plot. Have children write what happened before the first card, and what happened after the last card. Stories may be silly and creative, as long as it pertains to the plot.

Sequence Stories

player with the most completed sequences at the end wins! That player passes the card to the left, where the next player takes a card from the bucket and tries to complete the sequence. The cards go around to the left until a player completes a sequence. The playing surface. A player begins by taking one card from the bucket. Them randomly into a bucket. cards and challenge the children to complete as many sequences as possible. Are comfortable with the sequences, separate and mix up all the cards and challenge the children to build all 20 sequences, 10 at a time. Then flip the pieces over to complete the other side. When the children are comfortable with the sequences, 10 at a time. Then

Have a parent or teacher separate and mix up all of the cards.

Building Sequences

A sequence is the order in which things or events occur or are arranged. For example, three simple steps to having a glass of juice. 1) Getting to the refrigerator and taking out the juice, 2) Pouring the juice into a glass, 3) Drinking the glass of juice. Therefore, this set of puzzle cards will help to reinforce the results of cause and effect and simple reasoning skills.
